1. You'll begin with a sample image that you'll use as a basis for your Photoshop workflow. You'll keep the PSD file open as you perform the following steps. 2. **Open the AutoBlur_PHOTO_Sample.psd file**. The PSD file has a single layer for your image, so you will start with that. This is a good file to work with for learning techniques because it is fairly simple. 3. **If you aren't using version CS6 of Photoshop, then select File → Save**. 4. **Choose Photoshop → Preferences**. The Preferences dialog box opens. 5. **On the General tab, make sure the File Type is set to PNG**. In older versions of Photoshop, you had to change the Image Type to Photoshop 5 (PSD) or Photoshop 7 (PSD). You now have the option of setting the file type manually. There's no reason to set it to a higher-numbered file type unless you must for some reason. 6. **On the Layers panel, check the box next to "Group Transparent Layers"**. This checkbox creates a group of transparent layers and keeps them all together. In the first few chapters, you'll see all sorts of useful techniques that make use of these layers. If you aren't using them, you may want to leave this unchecked. 7. **Select the Layer thumbnail and then click OK**. The image layers now appear on the Layers panel. 8. **Use the box tool to begin selecting areas of the image to be faded**. The box tool (located at the top of your tool palette) has a small, rounded rectangle in the top-left corner of the toolbox. Click and drag on the image to select areas to fade. Many of the examples in this book involve the box tool, so you'll want to get comfortable with it. The box tool is easy to control because you can hold down your mouse button, and it will highlight the paths you're creating. If you change your mouse settings, remember to tell Photoshop that you're creating paths. You'll also find that the mouse stylus (or pen) has buttons located in front of the grip section, which are used to select and deselect multiple paths at once. (Press the left mouse button to open

Impact of the transaction is strongly related to the size of total loan. Does it mean, the bigger the loan size, the more likely the repayment would be to be impacted? A: You are right, that particular expression is used to indicate that the size of the loan leads to a high likelihood of being repaid (or otherwise). As one commenter said, you may find it useful to note that this is the etymology of the word "impact". There are many possible ways to show the logic of that sentence, like "The impact of the transaction is highly dependent on the size of the loan." shaders = "3" # for now shader0 = "shaders/crt-pass0.cg" filter_linear0 = "true" #scale, wrap
